Opportunity for Students!

Homework Express is looking for photos of viewers doing their homework. Photos will be used on our website and a video montage, which will air on the show. If you have any photos of your students or children doing their homework, please send them with the student's name and grade, as well as your contact information to our producers at homeworkexpress@gmail.com.

Behind the Scenes: Creating the Opening Sequence

Youngstown State University telecommunications majors Tony Marr and Jason Mauro created the opening sequence of our show, with associate producer Bill Brophy.

The process began by taking a series of photographs. For each scene, we shot from different angles, and for the teachers, different expressions. After capturing all of the images we needed, we sequenced them so that they moved in a logical progression.

For each episode, our teachers write a new introduction, which is read live. As the teacher reads it, we roll the recorded video sequence and synchronize the audio and video together.

The result is an opening sequence that audiences can identify, but changes enough to keep the show fresh and interesting to our regular viewers.

Crew Update

Producers of Homework Express use the show as a valuable learning opportunity for telecommunications students at Youngstown State University. They recently provided several these students with another chance to broaden their horizons and allowed crew members to switch to another position in the show they were interested in working.

The new crew line up is: Jessica Kistler, technical director, Ashley Himes, floor manager, Tony Marr, server/tape operator, Jason Mauro and Jimi Glancy on camera, Ryan McGehee, Josh Terlecki, on audio, Tony Marr, Kevin Bradway, graphics, Katie Libecco, phones, with production assistants Erica Trekur, Gary Angelo, Cory and Arman.
